

“Right now,
I’m helping with a pediatric liver transplant.

You can too.”

You may not think of supermodel Cindy Crawford as a transplant surgeon. Fortunately, she does not have to be a doctor to make a huge difference in the lives of hospitalized kids.

“By supporting American Family Children’s Hospital at the UW, I am proud to do my part in helping save a child’s life,” says Cindy.

Right now, your donation can help too – by helping build urgently needed additional critical care units where we care for very sick children.

Did you know that Cindy has been a longtime supporter of American Family Children’s Hospital? Her little brother Jeff was treated for leukemia here during the 1970s before passing away just before his 4th birthday. Since then, Cindy has generously supported the children’s hospital and pediatric cancer research at the UW.

“Right now,
I’m helping cure cancer.
You can too.”

You may not think of Coach Bo Ryan as a trained pediatric cancer specialist. Fortunately, he does not have to be a doctor to make a huge difference in the lives of hospitalized kids.

“By supporting American Family Children’s Hospital at the UW, I join my fellow Badger coaches in helping save a child’s life,” says Coach Ryan.

“Right now,
I’m helping repair
a heart defect.
You can too.”

You may not think of Coach Bret Bielema as a pediatric heart specialist. Fortunately, he does not have to be a doctor to make a huge difference in the lives of hospitalized kids.

“By supporting American Family Children’s Hospital at the UW, I join my fellow Badger coaches in helping save a child’s life,” says Coach Bielema.
